

Teaching children working significantly below age-related expectations in the light of the new Ofsted Framework

♦ Peter Imray

♦ Wednesday 11th March 2020 1.15—4.30

Peter Imray specialises in SEND training and advice, and is a respected expert in his field. Marula Consultancy is pleased to offer a half day session to SENCos and School Leaders in which Peter will help us to:

- ♦ Analyse how the National Curriculum, however differentiated this may be, creates tensions for teachers and children working significantly below their peers
- ♦ Explore the introduction of a multi-tiered curriculum model that looks to cater for all learners who are consistently and over time working well below age related expectations, recognising that such learners can and do flourish
- ♦ Look at, in some detail, Equals' new Formal Curriculum (due to be published in April 2020), concentrating especially on teaching Mathematics and English to those who struggle with both numeracy and literacy.

As part of the session, Peter will consider best practice in the adoption of a model which brings together a small group of children with similar difficulties from across the school .
